Click the "+" button and draw a curve. Press "Ctrl + " to "P"roceed, "C"ancel. If you want to change the curve click the button on the "X", "Y" and "Z" in the upper right hand corner. Great add-on, some improvement would be to have the (Z) and (C) keys on the toolbar, and a way to control the view as described in the tutorial (like on a 2d axis). Other than that, you have really great tool. Sorry, this is not the forum for feedback on changes to this site (those questions can be posted in our forums) -- you are welcome to post your suggestion and feedback in the "Comments" section, but it will not be seen by the original author. If you have other ideas for improvements, please do not hesitate to contact us. Thanks a lot. The tutorial part is nice but the documentation is not so good, is there a way to save the curve I just made? and that I can edit it later on? Also is there a way to merge all curves like the edge tool does? I'm not exactly sure if this is the right place for feedback on this add-on. I just installed it this afternoon and have not had the opportunity to play around with it much. However, my first impression is that this add-on does not seem to have any limitations that would prevent it from being a valuable tool for others. It does exactly what it says it does, 82157476af
